INTRODUCTION

In 1972 Claudia Lewis prophesied in her introduction to the ACEI publication Good and Inexpensive Books for Children, "The paperback wave of the future is upon us." Shortly thereafter, a joint committee of the Association for Childhood Education International and the American Association of School Librarians was set up to examine the feasibility of compiling a bibliography of quality paperbacks for children. The committee proceeded to examine listings of children's paperbacks and to "assess them for adequacy in serving the associations' audience." Thus the groundwork was laid for this publication.

In 1973 ACEI appointed an Excellent Paperbacks for Children Committee to begin the search for outstanding children's paperbacks that might be included in this bibliography. As its title suggests, the committee selected only those that met high standards in both content and format.

In 1975 our joint ACEI/AASL committee was set up to carry on the search of the 1973 ACEI committee. We are greatly indebted to Crystal McNally, Chairperson of the 1973–75 committee, and her colleagues for the long hours they spent in reading and evaluating the vast array of children's paperbacks then in print. Using the selections of the 1973–75 committee as a basis, our committee has added current titles. We have made a special effort to include books that particularly delighted and "turned on" the children who shared our evaluation process.

Unfortunately, because of the exigencies of the "education slow-press" some valuable, recent titles have not been included. Periodic updatings may help to make amends for these omissions.

Of the many award-winning children's books, we have noted only the Newbery and Caldecott Medal winners. Both medals are awarded annually by the American Library Association. The Newbery Medal goes to the author deemed to have made the most distinguished contribution to children's literature and the Caldecott to the illustrator of the most distinguished picture book of the year.

Realizing the great divergence in both interests and coping abilities among children within a single grade, we have chosen in this publication to indicate developmental instead of grade levels:

N—Nursery level (3- to 5-year-olds)
P—Primary level (6- to 9-year-olds)
I—Intermediate level (9- to 12-year-olds)
A—Adolescent level (12-year-olds and beyond)

The appropriate symbol immediately follows each annotation. It precedes information relating to the publisher and the price. A double symbol, such as N-P, P-I, or I-A, indicates the book has a wide interest span.

A subject index ranging from "Adult Resources" to "Sports" (pages 43–50) directs the reader to eleven different topics.

We hope that parents and other adults choosing books for children will give due consideration to the interests and abilities of the individual child, and not limit their selections too closely to the indicated age levels. Further, it is our hope that the information set down in this publication will help boys and girls themselves find the just-right book for their reading enjoyment.

All who find this bibliography useful—children and adults alike—should count themselves indebted to Alberta L. Meyer, Executive Director Emeritus, Association for Childhood Education International, and to Lu Ouida Vinson Phillips, former Executive Secretary, and Alice E. Fite, Executive Secretary, American Association of School Librarians. Without their cooperation and assistance, this 1979 edition of Excellent Paperbacks for Children would never have found its way into print.

DOROTHY W. HEALD, Chairperson
1975–78 ACEI/AASL Excellent Paperbacks for Children Committee

Editor's Note: The descriptions, prices and publisher listings in this bibliography were compiled as accurately as possible as of October 1978. In these times, however, prices and names and addresses in the publishing industry are constantly changing. Only books in print—according to our latest information—were included (some of these may soon be out of print). When consulting this guide, please bear in mind that change is inevitable!

RESOURCE GUIDE FOR PARENTS, TEACHERS AND LIBRARIANS

ELIZABETH M. THOMPSON, Media Specialist, Library and Media Services Division, University of the District of Columbia, Washington, D.C.

The books mentioned in the preceding bibliography represent only a sampling of the thousands of children's paperbacks. The basic list to consult on titles currently available is the Juveniles Section of Paperbound Books in Print, which may be used in bookstores or libraries. Some of the more specialized guides produced for parents, teachers and librarians are identified below as a convenience to readers.

In addition, several magazines provide regularly published lists to help one learn about new titles. Booklist carries monthly lists of paperback reprints of hardcover children's books. The Horn Book magazine frequently prints lists of recommended paperback titles along with its book reviews, and Teacher publishes paperback reviews twice a year.

Publishers usually will supply their catalogs upon request, but most of them discourage direct orders for a single copy of a paperback title. To place orders for larger quantities, it would be wise to call on an educational jobber who specializes in selling to schools and libraries or to check the Yellow Pages for a book wholesaler who serves stores in your locality. For background information on distributors, consult Gillespie's volume on Paperback Books for Young People, or write to the Educational Paperback Association, 1600 East Grand Boulevard, Detroit, MI 48211.

Any school, library or community group interested in giving paperback books to children for reading motivation may secure helpful information on methods of funding and distribution by writing to the field staff of Reading Is Fundamental (RIF), 475 L'Enfant Plaza, Suite 4800, Washington, DC 20560.

ACEI's Bibliography is considered among the top resources in the selection of reading materials for children.
Here it is in a 1977 Edition— Teachers, families, librarians and others will find its 112 pages of annotated listings invaluable. Hundreds of new titles published since the last edition were read by ACEI's Review Committee for this up-to-date Bibliography. These include particularly many about aging and the aged, changing sex-roles and topics reflecting current social patterns. All-time favorites and classics take their place too. The Bibliography covers both fiction and non-fiction, books for reading and for being read to. General age levels and subject categories are indicated in the Table of Contents, while Author Index and Title Index locate specific items. Winners of the major children's literary awards are noted. "We speak for all the children of all the nations, all the lands, knowing well that in their common human core is more of likeness than of difference, knowing too that only as we reach that common core in children will men the world over reach it in each other." So spoke Agnes Snyder, an early leader, of the purpose of the Association for Childhood Education International.

Founded in 1892 as the International Kindergarten Union, the organization became the Association for Childhood Education in 1930. The National Council of Primary Education merged with the Association the next year. "International" was added to the name in 1946. Membership is open to all concerned with the education and well-being of children. Teachers, parents, college students, teacher educators, pediatricians, day care and community workers and others help make up the membership in 70 countries, mostly in active branches but also through individual memberships.

ACEI works to promote desirable conditions, programs and practices for children from infancy through early adolescence. Members strive to inform the public of the needs of children and work for the education and well-being of all children. ACEI's active publishing program includes an award-winning journal Childhood Education, bulletins, pamphlets and position papers.
